Press Release

To mark the bicentennial of photography, Intervalle is presenting a solo exhibition by Lucas Leffler (Belgium, 1993) in the main section of Paris Photo.

After six years of collaboration and three joint appearances at Paris Photo, the artist and the gallery are particularly pleased to present this year a new body of work dedicated to the evolution of the photographic medium. Most of the works on display will be shown for the first time and are one-of-a-kind pieces.

Since the beginning of his career, Lucas Leffler has been developing a body of work that examines the history of contemporary photography and, more specifically, the transition from analog to digital. Through experimental works, he explores the transformations of the medium and the upheavals in our visual landscapes. The booth notably highlights Kodak, whose history serves as a starting point for examining this shift.
